Patients once again choose SA's top 20 hospitals on experience of care

17 July 2017

Promising patient experience scores show that hospitals are increasingly meeting higher patient expectations and needs.

Who better to describe the reality of the healthcare experience in South Africa's private hospitals than the patient? This week's announcement of the country's top 20 hospitals for 2016 is based on the results of the most recent Discovery Health Patient Survey Score (PaSS) initiative, now in its third year. The globally validated survey allows patients to constructively voice their views to healthcare providers of how care was experienced during admission to hospital.

Through the survey, patients have an opportunity to actively participate in the delivery of care by highlighting gaps and creating momentum for improvement.

“Measuring quality of care, including patient experience, is standard practice in healthcare systems around the world,” says Head of Quality of Care at Discovery Health, Dr Roshini Moodley Naidoo. “Healthcare systems that value and enable best quality of care are known to reduce unnecessary costs and offer improved health outcomes for patients. Our measurement of quality of care, the public reporting thereof, and the improvement strategies that healthcare providers implement, hold the potential to improve healthcare delivery,” adds Moodley Naidoo. “Through the survey, awareness of quality of care has increased. Since publication of the survey scores, we are observing positive changes in how care is experienced by patients. Truly best in class healthcare systems are those that are nimble and constantly learning and improving. By measuring and improving quality of care, we aspire to be a healthcare system of sustained excellence.”

To collect patient feedback on the experience of care in hospital, adult members of Discovery Health Medical Scheme are surveyed after their discharge from hospital. The survey covers questions across important categories such as how well pain was managed, the preparation of patients for care following discharge, and whether patients experienced communication from healthcare providers as respectful and easy to understand. To ensure a fair and equitable comparison between hospitals, the analysis considers factors that hospitals cannot reasonably control such as the nature of illness and the age and gender of patients. Overall, 136 hospitals were included in the analysis of patient experience scores.

Moodley Naidoo points out: “There are many factors contributing to quality of care in hospitals. A lower patient experience score does not necessarily mean a hospital does not deliver high quality care. The experience score does reveal areas for potential improvement in how patients experience care – areas the hospital may already be addressing.”

Since the inception of PaSS in 2014, there has been an increase in the number of survey responses. Further, there has been a steady improvement in patient scores across survey categories such as information about care following discharge. Patients who are prepared well for discharge have better health outcomes, and are at lower risk of repeat admissions.

“Discovery Health congratulates all hospitals in the Top 20, including those that have sustained their positions in the honours list over three consecutive years through committed improvement efforts. The Top 20 hospitals must be commended for building a more patient-centred healthcare system, which understands and responds quickly to patients’ needs, and involves patients and their families in care decisions,” adds Moodley Naidoo.
